The Transatlantic Slave Trade: 1440–1870 by David Eltis and David Richardson. The book explores the history of the transatlantic slave trade, the economy, and the cultural and political transformations it brought about. It offers a comprehensive overview of the trade, its impact on the African, European, and American societies, and the factors that fueled it. The book is based on a large amount of primary and secondary sources, including archival records, oral histories, and scholarly articles.

American Journal of Islamic Social Sciences 28:3 (2011) 000-000-000-000-0000. This article discusses the impact of Islam on the American economy, focusing on Islamic finance and investment. It highlights the key role of Islamic finance in providing a flexible tool for carving out new areas of inquiry.

The Cambridge History of America and the Islamic World: Volume 1, 1450 to the Present by David E. Schabes. This book provides a comprehensive overview of the history of America and the Islamic world, focusing on the interactions between the two regions, particularly in the 1450-2000 period. It covers a wide range of topics, including trade, religion, politics, and culture.

Sacred Interests: American Christians and Islam by Matthew J. Hale. This book explores the complex interactions between American Christians and Islam, focusing on the period from the early 19th century to the present. It highlights the changing attitudes and perceptions of American Christians towards Islam, and the impact of these attitudes on American society.

The Fourth Volume of The Cambridge History of America and the Islamic World by David E. Schabes. This volume continues the comprehensive overview of the history of America and the Islamic world, focusing on the 16th-21st centuries. It covers a wide range of topics, including trade, religion, politics, and culture.

The American Journal of Islamic Social Sciences is an interdisciplinary journal that publishes a wide variety of scholarly research on all facets of Islam and the Muslim world: anthropology, economics, history, philosophy and politics. It is a valuable resource for scholars and students interested in the study of Islam and the Muslim world.
explain how the United States could become both the best and the worst in the Turkish political imagination. Gürel traces how ideas about westernization and America have influenced national history writing and policy making, as well as everyday affairs and identities. Foregrounding shifting tropes about and from Turkey—a regional power that continues to dominate American visions for the "modernization" of the Middle East—Gürel also illuminates the transnational development of powerful political tropes, from "the Terrible Turk" to "the Islamic Terrorist."

How the Arabian Nights Inspired the American Dream, 1790-1935
Susan Nance 2009 The leisure, abundance, and contentment that many imagined were typical of Eastern life were the same characteristics used to define "the American dream."—BOOK JACKET.

Christian-Muslim Relations. A Bibliographical History Volume 16 North America, South-East Asia, China, Japan, and Australasia (1800-1914) 2020-06-29 Christian-Muslim Relations. A Bibliographical History Volume 16 North America, South-East Asia, China, Japan, and Australasia (1800-1914) is about relations between the two faiths in North America, South-East Asia, China, Japan and Australasia from 1800 to 1914. It gives descriptions, assessments and bibliographical details of all known works from this period.